

Letter from Alexander Graham Bell to Alexander Melville Bell, May 12, 1872

Don't you think it could be arranged to give Carrie a little trip this summer? If she should come to the states about the end of June I could show her about Hartford and Northampton. She could go in to Boston and hear the Peace Jubilee. On the first of July I would be there and could show her about a little and bring her safely home. I shall go to Boston at all events (before returning home) in order to make arrangements for returning in the autumn.
